

Kristian Stout

Eagleton Fellow 2013

Associate Director for Innovation Policy, The International Center for Law & Economics

Former Assembly Candidate, NJ 14th District

Kristian Stout, associate director for innovation policy at the International Center for Law and Economics (ICLE), has been a technology professional and entrepreneur for over ten years. He works on policy areas that include intellectual property, antitrust, telecommunications, and Internet governance. A contributor to TheHill.com and a fellow in the Internet Law & Policy Foundry, Stout has been a lecturer in the computer science department of Rutgers University, is frequently invited to speak on law and technology topics, and has been published in law journals and legal treatises. He is an attorney licensed to practice law in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, is counsel at the software firm A&S Technologies, and sits on the boards of CodedByKids, a nonprofit organization that provides STEM education to underprivileged children, as well as the New Jersey Leadership Program, a nonprofit devoted to helping South Asian youth gain practical experience in politics and policy. Stout graduated magna cum laude from the Rutgers University School of Law, served on the editorial board of the Rutgers Journal of Law and Public Policy, and was awarded a Governor's Executive Fellowship from the Eagleton Institute of Politics.