Ingrid Reed will talk about issues facing voters in New Jersey.

UNION -- Political analyst Ingrid W. Reed will address issues facing New Jersey voters, when she speaks at the YM-YWHA of Union County on Thursday evening, Sept. 24.

Her topics will include the economy, taxes, health care and education in the program which is open to the public, and sponsored by the National Council of Jewish Women, Union County Section.

Open to the public, the program will cover current political hot topics and the impact of political choices in this election year.

The program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. on Sept. 24 at the YM-YWHA of Union County, 501 Green Lane, Union.

A question and answer period will follow Reed's presentation. The Y is a barrier-free building. There is no charge to attend.

Ingrid W. Reed directs the New Jersey Project, an initiative to reinforce and expand the contributions of Rutgers' Eagleton Institute of Politics to the governance and politics of its home state. Among its initiatives are programs on campaign, election and ethics reform, governance issues and initiatives to promote information for citizen participation.

Reed has directed studies on television and press coverage of New Jersey election campaigns, on election administration, on ethics reform and issues of voter participation. She is frequently interviewed for analysis of New Jersey politics by state, national and international media and has written op-ed columns for major New Jersey newspapers.

The National Council of Jewish Women, a grassroots organization of volunteers and advocates, strives for social justice by improving the quality of life for women, children and families and by safeguarding individual rights and freedoms. The Union County Section welcomes inquiries by anyone interested in learning more about its activities.
