A new survey out today from the Rutgers' Eagleton Institute of Politics shows slightly more New Jersey voters have a favorable impression of President Obama than Governor Christie, even though far more grade Christie's job performance as an A or B than Obama.

"People appear to like Obama himself better than they like his job performance," said David Redlawsk, the poll director.

The data also show that Obama's favorable/unfavorable ratings have come up since August among registered voters, but the improvement was not as significant among those who actually voted in the Nov. 8 legislative elections.
