TRENTON — A new poll shows Gov. Chris Christie continues to see a bounce from his handling of Superstorm Sandy.

But residents are divided by party about how he's doing on the issues of jobs and taxes.

The Rutgers-Eagleton poll released Wednesday shows 85 percent or more of Republicans, Democrats and independents approve of Christie's post-Sandy recovery efforts. But only 41 percent of all voters approve of how he's handling economic issues.

Pollster David Redlawsk says the post-Sandy benefits for Christie have lasted longer than expected. By comparison, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo's sky-high post-Sandy approval rating has dropped 20 points.

The poll of 763 registered New Jersey voters was conducted from June 3-9 and has a margin of error of 3.6 percentage points.

Christie's milking Sandy for all he can. He hopes residents don't remember the Billions of dollars he cost us with the added fees and taxes, the Hudson River Tunnel fiasco, the Education Funding boondoggle, and the Revel bailouts.
