Public Service & Education, Applied Research

Director, Eagleton Institute of Politics, September 1, 2023 - Present

Director, Center for Youth Political Participation Program (CYPP) (formerly Youth Political Participation Program), Eagleton Institute of Politics, Fall 2006-Present

Responsible for articulating the program's vision, bringing vision to life, and securing funding for CYPP projects.

Created and administer the Center Youth Political Participation Internship in the Department of Political Science program (Course 481/482).

Responsible for media requests regarding youth civic and political engagement and have been featured in local, state, national, and international media. Also oversee the Center for Youth Political Participation website (cyp.p.rutgers.edu) and social media platforms.

Director, Darien Civic Engagement Project, 2012-Present

The Darien Civic Engagement Project brings together students with a shared passion for political learning and action. Students consider American political thought in relation to contemporary politics and complement their study with hands on experiences that allow them to put the theory of politics into practice.

Served as co-principal investigator for research studying the effects of the project on students' political knowledge, skills, and attitudes.

Project Director, RU Ready, Winter 2007-Present

Created the project and piloted it in New Brunswick and Perth Amboy High Schools with a grant from the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation in the fall of 2007. National expansion currently taking place with partners at Rutgers-Newark, Drew University, and University of Texas at Austin as well as digital expansion via RU Ready in the Classroom.

RU Ready is an initiative designed to provide high school students with the encouragement and tools to be civically engaged.

As part of a collaboration with Rutgers University's Graduate School of Applied and Professional Psychology, mentored doctoral student Matt Strobel and worked with him to pilot RU Ready in schools within Middlesex Regional Educational Services Commission that serve young people with emotional and behavioral disabilities. 2007-2008 academic year.

Served as principal investigator for qualitative research studying the effectiveness of RU Ready and exploring the contours of political efficacy among the students exposed to the program.

Project Director, RU Voting, Fall 2006-Present

RU Voting is an initiative to register, educate, and mobilize Rutgers students to participate in local, state, and national elections. Work includes conducting registration and get-out-the-vote drives, hosting debate watches and public forums, creating and administering the RU Voting Rutgers and RU Voting National websites.

Rutgers University-New Brunswick's faculty representative for voter engagement efforts including Students Learn Students Vote, the All in Voting Challenge, the Big Ten Voting Challenge, and New Jersey's Ballot Bowl.

Eagleton's faculty representative for the National Campaign for Civic and Political Engagement, Harvard University's Institute of Politics. The National Campaign consists of a collection of over 20 colleges and universities from around the country.

Principal investigator for an original qualitative research project entitled "What RU Thinking?" – a series of focus groups with Rutgers students designed to better understand the contours of political and civic engagement and the attitudes underlying such behavior.

Project Director, Young Elected Leaders Project, Fall 2006-Present

Launched in 2002 with funding from the Pew Charitable Trusts, the Young Elected Leaders Project (YELP) studies and works with young people who run for public office. With this work, Eagleton constructed a database of young elected officials; conducted a survey of young elected leaders regarding their background and leadership experience; convened a conference of young leaders in May 2003; and issued a report entitled Political Generation Next: America's Young Elected Leaders. Serve as principal investigator on current YELP research.

As extension of Young Elected Leaders Project and in partnership with the League of Women Voters of New Jersey's Young Peoples Network, piloted RU Running, a campaign training for college students. Spring 2016-present.
